Climb Mount Farquhar or Hike Cataract Creek Trail for Mental Health and Wellness
Saturday, June 24, 2017

When I returned [from Afghanistan] in the spring of 2010, I came back a different man. I was withdrawn, paranoid, not sleeping, jumpy, depressed and the list could go on and on. It took a panic attack that seemed to last an entire night that led me to get help. I was then diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder and referred to the Occupational Stress Injury (OSI) Clinic here in Calgary. The OSI Clinic has literally saved my life. - Corporal Ryan Forest, served with Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry (PPCLI) in Afghanistan 2009-2010

About the PPCLI Foundation

PPCLI FOUNDATION

Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry (PPCLI), named in honour of Princess Patricia daughter of the Duke of Connaught at the time Governor General of Canada, was formed in August 1914. The Patricias became the first Canadian regiment in the field when they landed in France in December 1914. The Regiment has served Canada continuously for more than 100 Years.

The PPCLI Foundation is an autonomous, independent and charitable entity. Registered as a charitable public foundation in 2011. Since then it has raised more than $2.2 million in cash and in-kind in support of veterans and their families.

Why Mount Farquhar?

Lieutenant-Colonel Francis D. Farquhar, DSO was born on September 17, 1874 in England. He joined the Coldstream Guards in 1896, and saw action in the Boer War in South Africa between 1899 and 1900 and with the 'Weihaiwei' Chinese Regiment of Infantry in 1901 where he was awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

When World War I broke out, Farquhar was serving as Military Secretary to the Governor General and supported Andrew Hamilton Gault's offer to found the PPCLI. As its first Commanding Officer, Farquhar led the Regiment through its introduction to trench warfare. In Belgium, on the night of March 19, 1915, while supervising wire-laying during the relief of another unit in the front line, Lt.-Col. Farquhar was shot and died soon after. Although his tenure was short-lived, he credited for establishing the professionalism and sense of duty within the Regiment, and contributed greatly to its fighting spirit.
